Primary Platforms: Integration testing occurs on these platforms, but DecisionSpace® and classic technologies may support different platforms (e.g., Solaris support on classic technologies only).
Secondary Platforms: Certain product groups have committed to deliver on additional platforms in the R5000 timeframe, however, integrated workflows across products may not be supported on these secondary platforms (e.g., many of the Drilling products will deliver on Microsoft® Vista™, but workflows using OpenWorks with these Drilling applications will not be supported on Vista™).

- Backoffice processing only.
- Linux® 4.4 using a 32-bit kernel is required to allow for third-party dependencies.
- Front-end components require Windows 2003 Server. Back-end components require Red Hat® Enterprise Linux® 5 - 64-bit.
- ARIES has not been tested on Windows 2003 Server 64-bit.
- Discovery 3D runs on Windows Vista 64 only; it does not run on Windows XP.
- The primary test platform for Discovery projects and DSS is Windows Vista 64; secondary platforms include Windows Vista 32, XP 64 and XP 32. Windows Server 2008 is the primary network server test platform for Discovery Sybase projects.
- Pressworks database can be installed on Oracle Server on various platforms, Linux, Windows or Solaris.
- OpenWorks Software Development Kit programs must be built on RedHat 4.X (4.4 or later) but may be deployed on either 4.X or 5.x
- OpenWorks Development Kit programs must be built as 32-bit executables on Solaris. We do not support native 64-bit. But they will run on 64-machines

All products with the exception of Nexus, VIP and Discovery 3D have been tested in Landmark's application hosting environment.

Landmark has used commercially-reasonable efforts to test the operability of its software on certain platforms (certain operating systems and hardware systems). The results of this testing is documented on the table above and will be updated by Landmark (from time-to-time)/(at least quarterly). Although Landmark will conduct this testing and update the table publishing the test results, Landmark does not warrant or guarantee the accuracy or completeness of this information. Customers accept full responsibility for any investment or business decision made based on the information in the table.
