Although the technology used by the Halliburton ICE Core® service is unique to the oil and gas industry, the techniques employed have been recognized by many peer-reviewed and respected publications across other industries since the 90s.

To learn more about the technology behind this revolutionary new way to accurately analyze fluids downhole, please see the following list of publications:

Coates, J. 2005. A New Approach to Near- and Mid-Infrared Process Analysis - Encoded photometric infrared technology has the ability to address the demands of modern process applications, including

